INTRODUCTION

Alleged child maltreatment is reported to all 71 county social or human services departments in the state and to the Bureau of Milwaukee Child Welfare in Milwaukee (BMCW), hereinafter referred to as "agencies." Data regarding each report investigated is sent to and compiled by the Department of Health and Family Services in order to allow decision makers, service providers and the public to understand and effectively respond to trends in child maltreatment.

This report presents specific county data and state-wide data for 1999. Data regarding the number of children reported includes only those reports screened in by the agency as potentially being within the parameters of statutory definitions of alleged child maltreatment. These are the reports that are investigated. Not all reports received are appropriate for investigation. Although they may represent a concern for a child or family, the concerns may not rise to a level to warrant public intervention. Referrals that are screened out and not investigated are not included in the data. Families with screened out referrals may still be offered agency services or referred to appropriate community resources.

The quality of the data in this report is dependent upon the quality and accuracy of data submitted by the local agencies. The State of Wisconsin looks forward to full implementation of the statewide automated child welfare information system (WiSACWIS) as it will greatly expand the type of data collected and improve the timeliness and æcuracy of child welfare data throughout the state.

Laws and policies concerning child maltreatment pertain to children 17 years of age or less, unless otherwise specified. Child maltreatment is generally divided into four basic types: physical neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse and emotional abuse. In addition, threats of child abuse and neglect must be reported to and investigated by the county agencies and BMCW. These cases are categorized as maltreatment that is likely to occur.

Physical neglect is defined in the statute as "failure, refusal or inability on the part of a parent, guardian, legal custodian or other person exercising temporary or permanent control over a child, for reasons other than poverty, to provide necessary care, food, clothing, medical or dental care or shelter so as to seriously endanger the physical health of the child."

[Ref. s. 48.981(1)(d), Stats.]

Physical abuse is defined as "physical injury inflicted on a child by other than accidental means." [Ref. s. 48.02(1)(a), Stats.] This includes non-accidental injury inflicted by any other person. "'Physical injury' includes but is not limited to lacerations, fractured bones, burns, internal injuries, severe or frequent bruising or great bodily harm, as defined in s. 939.22(14)." [Ref. s. 48.02(14g), Stats.]

Sexual abuse is defined by cross-referencing several crimes in other sections of the statutes. These crimes and the child maltreatment reporting laws can be found in Appendix B. Briefly, sexual abuse includes the following:

- any person having sexual intercourse or sexual contact with a child 15 years of age or less;
- any person having sexual intercourse with a 16or 17-year old child without his or her consent;
- any person inducing a child to engage in sexually explicit conduct in order to videotape, photograph, etc., that child or videotaping, photographing, etc., a child for such purposes, or producing, distributing, selling or otherwise profiting from such a videotape, photograph, etc.:

- a person responsible for a child's welfare encouraging or permitting the child to engage in sexually explicit conduct for the purpose of videotaping, photographing, etc.;
- any person causing a child to view or listen to sexual activity;
- any person exposing genitals to a child; and/or
- any person permitting or encouraging a child to engage in prostitution.

Emotional abuse is defined as "Emotional damage for which the child's parent, guardian or legal custodian has neglected, refused or been unable for reasons other than poverty to obtain the necessary treatment or to take steps to ameliorate the symptoms." [Ref. s. 48.02(1)(gm), Stats.]

The definitions of child neglect and emotional abuse involve failure on the part of parents or other persons responsible for a child to provide necessary care for a child. In most cases, the parties involved are family members and solutions involve interventions with the family. In some of these cases, court intervention is required to assure safety and order services for the family.

The definitions of physical abuse and sexual abuse include harm to a child by any other person. Therefore, physical or sexual abuse of a child by a parent is included, as are assaults by strangers, persons unrelated to a child's family, and peers. In cases where the child is harmed by someone outside of the family, interventions with the family do not provide all of the solutions. In many of these cases, law enforcement involvement through the criminal system is necessary to intervene with the person who harmed the child.

Because public perception of what constitutes child maltreatment generally is limited to harm caused by a child's parents or other family or household member, it is important to understand that statistics in Wisconsin include physical injury to a child or sexual contact with a child by any person. The category where the data is most influenced by nonfamilial maltreatment is the category of sexual abuse. Wisconsin totals include a number of cases of sexual assault by peers (from unwanted touching to "date rape"). Tables in the report show totals that allow the reader to distinguish between abuse of a child by a caregiver and assault of a child by another person.

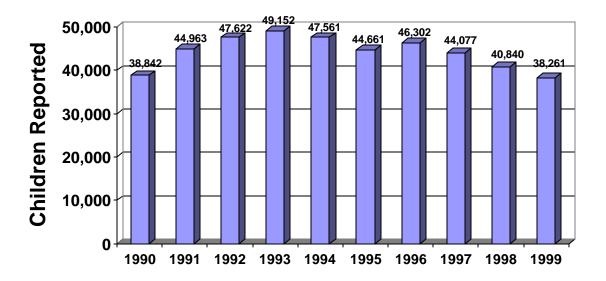

Sexual abuse also includes mutual sexual activity between minors if at least one of the minors is less than 16 years of age. The fact that no coercion, exploitation or assault was involved is irrelevant under Wisconsin statutes.

The total number of cases of mutual sexual activity involving a minor under 16 years of age has been removed from the child maltreatment totals on some of the graphs and tables. These cases range from reports of pre-schoolers who inappropriately touch other pre-schoolers to reports of teenagers who are sexually active. Tables and graphs are clearly identified as to whether these cases are included in the totals.

Information in this report reflects data from CY 1999. The 1999 data includes some cases in which the alleged maltreatment occurred in a previous year but was reported and assessed in 1999. Information is relayed almost entirely through graphs and tables. Totals cited in graphs, tables and text throughout this report may not always be consistent because more than one type of maltreatment may be associated with one child, more than one maltreater may be involved with a child, and more than one reporter may be associated with a specific maltreatment report.

CHILD MALTREATMENT

REPORTERS OF ABUSE OR NEGLECT AND THE INVESTIGATION ASSESSMENT

Certain individuals whose employment brings them into contact with children are required by law to report any suspected abuse or neglect to a child seen in the course of their professional duties. Anyone who suspects a child is being maltreated may make such a referral. Persons making reports in good faith are immune from criminal or civil liability. Table 1 describes the profession or relationship to the child of persons who reported suspected child maltreatment in 1999.

Wisconsin's decentralized reporting system allows any concerned individual to report suspected abuse or neglect directly to an agency or local law enforcement. (See listing of where to report in Appendix A.) Any report received by law enforcement officials must subsequently be referred to the local agency.

Upon receiving a report, the agency must first determine if the information constitutes an allegation of child maltreatment or threatened harm as defined by the statutes. If the report is screened in as an appropriate concern of child maltreatment, the Child Protective Services (CPS) worker in the agency must initiate an investigation assessment within 24 hours after the receipt of the report and complete it within 60 days. Reports which suggest a child is in current or imminent danger receive an immediate response.

The focus of the CPS assessment is not to establish legal culpability (cases are referred to law enforcement and then possibly to court for that purpose), but to assure the child's safety and to determine whether the child and family are in need of any services. The investigation assessment must be conducted in accordance with standards established by the Wisconsin Department of Health & Family Services. Established in September of 1994, the Child Protective Service Investigation Standards recognize that the CPS role must differ in cases of familial and nonfamilial maltreatment.

In cases of familial maltreatment, the investigation assessment includes an interview with and observation of the child, a visit to the home, an interview with any siblings and an interview with the parents. Decisions which must be made include whether the child is safe, whether risk conditions are present, whether maltreatment occurred and whether the family is in need of services to assure the safety and well-being of the child. Many elements enter into the decision-making process: the child's functioning and ability to communicate, characteristics and behaviors of the parents, physical evidence, functioning of the family, and the absence or presence of stressful family circumstances.

In response to reports of maltreatment by individuals outside the family, the CPS role is to support the parents and other appropriate adults in meeting the child's needs. Respect for the privacy, values and rights of each family member underlies all aspects of investigative procedures. (See Appendix B, Child Maltreatment Related Statutes, for statutory definitions of child abuse and neglect in Wisconsin and for categories of persons required to report child abuse and neglect.)

CASE FINDINGS

Upon completion of an investigation assessment, the agency must determine whether abuse or neglect has occurred or is likely to occur. Case findings for allegations that maltreatment has occurred are "substantiated" and "unsubstantiated." Case findings for allegations that abuse or neglect is likely to occur are "likely to occur" and "not found likely to occur."

For both types of cases, a third finding may be used: "not able to locate sources of information and/or subjects of the report – unsubstantiated." This finding is to be used only when the agency is unable to locate critical family members or others involved in the report, making it impossible to gather the information needed to make a determination.

Prior to 1996, there were three different case findings: "substantiated", "unsubstantiated" and "not able to substantiate." These case findings were used for allegations that abuse or neglect occurred, as well as for allegations that abuse or neglect was likely to occur. Therefore, whereas in previous years "substantiated" cases included both types of allegations, beginning in 1996, "substantiated" cases refer only to cases where maltreatment has occurred.

The agency can determine that abuse or neglect has occurred or is likely to occur without making a formal finding that a particular person has maltreated or will maltreat a child. Therefore, the agency can identify and respond to children in need of protection or services even when a specific maltreater cannot be positively identified.

After conducting a thorough investigation assessment, the CPS worker must make the above determination based upon a preponderance of the evidence. A preponderance of evidence is a lower standard of evidence than needed for proof for juvenile or criminal court procedures. Therefore, a CPS worker may have sufficient information to substantiate an alleged child abuse or neglect case, but there may not be sufficient evidence for a juvenile court finding of Child in Need of Protection or Services (CHIPS) or for criminal court prosecution because of the higher burden of proof required.

A determination is made for each child and each type of alleged abuse or neglect. The agency must also determine whether the child or any member of the child's family is in need of services. This is the critical decision for CPS. The need for services is based more upon identifying children who are unsafe (in imminent danger) and children who are at risk of maltreatment than on the substantiation decision.

Unsubstantiated cases sometimes involve families where parents' care for their children is beginning to deteriorate because of life stresses or crises that they are having difficulty handling. Agencies often are able to assist these families in accessing other community resources and in receiving needed support before the family's problems become critical.

The variance in the county substantiation rate (Table 2) is affected by a number of factors, including the quality of information gathered at phone intake, the screening criteria and rates, the quality of information gathered during the investigation assessment, prevailing community standards, and worker and agency judgment.

^{*} The term "report" actually refers to a count of children suspected of being maltreated. A child maltreatment case, which is documented on a child maltreatment form, may include more than one maltreatment victim, and there may be more than one allegation per victim. In this table, the category "Maltreatment Substantiations" does not include cases with the finding "Abuse/Neglect Found Likely to Occur." Reports of mutual sexual activity are included in the totals in this table.

FATALITIES

The death of a child is one of the most tragic consequences of abuse and neglect. The role of Child Protective Services in the case of death by abuse or neglect is to assure the safety of any other children present in the family and to assess the family's need for services. Investigations of the death are generally handled by law enforcement agencies. There were 11 substantiated cases of a child having died from maltreatment in 1999, as reported by agencies to the Department of Health and Family Services.

CHARACTERISTICS OF MALTREATERS

When the agency makes a determination that a report of maltreatment is substantiated, the determination does not necessarily include a specific finding as to who maltreated the child. However, in the course of the investigation assessment, the agency worker often makes judgments about who has harmed or is failing to protect a child as part of assessing the child's safety needs. In this report, statistical data collected regarding assumed maltreaters reflects social worker judgments rather than legal determinations that a person has maltreated a child.

Cases of mutual sexual activity are not included in this table as there is no maltreater in such cases. By definition, the sexual activity involved is mutual. These cases include children 15 years old or younger who engage in sexual contact or intercourse as defined by the statutes, but where there is no coercion, exploitation or assaultive behavior involved. There were 1,927 such cases reported in 1999.

SERVICE TO FAMILIES

If a child is determined to be unsafe, the county agency provides services designed to control those conditions making the child unsafe. "Safety services" are provided in the home whenever possible, to maintain and support the family unit. If in-home services would be insufficient to assure the safety of the child, every effort is made to place the child temporarily in an alternate placement. Safety services differ from treatment services in that they are not intended to change behavior or impact underlying causes of child maltreatment over the course of treatment. Rather, they must immediately control any conditions or behaviors that place a child in danger. The addition of in-home safety services for families that come to the attention of the Bureau of Milwaukee Child Welfare has greatly enhanced effective early intervention and response to both substantiated and unsubstantiated cases.

The following tables describe the safety services provided to families during or immediately following completion of the investigation assessment. Treatment services, provided to families later during the course of treatment, are not reflected here. More than one safety service may be provided to a family.

^{*} Note: The CPS worker may provide brief counseling or referral services to families as part of the investigation assessment. Those services are not reflected in these tables.

^{} Note: Data regarding referral to law enforcement should not be construed as a lack of law enforcement involvement. Many referrals received by the local agencies come from law enforcement. In these situations, the CPS agency often works with the law enforcement agency to respond to the referral, but the case would not be captured statistically as a referral to law enforcement.

APPENDIX B

CHILD MALTREATMENT RELATED STATUTES

Following are excerpts from the Wisconsin Statutes that create the basis for persons to report suspected child maltreatment and for child protective services agencies to respond. The excerpts are from the updated 1999-2000 Wisconsin Statutes Database. (Note: The excerpts appear exactly as they would appear in the published statutes. Therefore, other portions of the statutes not relevant to child maltreatment are included on some pages.)

Included in the excerpts are sections from Chapter 48, known as the Children's Code, and sections from criminal statutes that are cross-referenced in the Children's Code in order to define child abuse.

Specifically, the following statutory sections are included:

- s.48.01 Title and legislative purpose.
- s.48.02 Definitions. This includes definitions of child abuse.
- s.48.13 Jurisdiction over children alleged to be in need of protection or services. This describes the basis on which the local child protective services agencies (county social/human services departments and the Bureau of Milwaukee Child Welfare) may petition the court to intervene with a family.
- s.48.981 Abused or neglected children and abused unborn children This section defines child neglect, describes the reporting requirements of alleged child maltreatment and describes the child protective services agencies' duties and responsibilities.

- s.939.22 Words and phrases defined. This section defines terms that are used in describing certain crimes, some of which are crossreferenced in s.48.02 in order to define child abuse.
- s.940.225 Sexual assault. This defines the crime of sexual assault and is cross-referenced under s.48.02(1)(b).
- s.944.30 Prostitution. This defines the crime of prostitution and is cross-referenced under s.48.02(1)(d).
- s.948.02 Sexual assault of a child. This is the first in a series of crimes from Chapter 948, known as Crimes Against Children, that are cross-referenced under s.48.02(1)(b) in order to define child sexual abuse. The following sections are also cross-referenced under s. 48.02(1):
- s.948.025 Engaging in repeated acts of sexual assault of the same child.
- s.948.05 Sexual exploitation of a child.
- s.948.055 Causing a child to view or listen to sexual activity.
- s.948.10 Exposing genitals or pubic area.
